Brief description of the seminar: As in previous years, the Department of Philosophy successfully organized its annual departmental seminar this year as well. The seminar was held on 20/05/2026 in Room No. 19, and the topic chosen for discussion was “রবীন্দ্রনাথ অনুসরণে মানুষের স্বরূপ”. The event witnessed enthusiastic participation from both students and faculty members.

The programme was inaugurated by the Head of the Department, who delivered an insightful and thought-provoking inaugural speech. He explained that the seminar topic had been selected after careful consultation with all the faculty members of the department, considering its deep relevance in the present social and intellectual context. In his address, the H.O.D. emphasized the importance of such academic activities in enriching students' classroom learning and broadening their intellectual horizons through active participation and critical engagement.

Other respected teachers of the department also encouraged the students to take part in seminars and similar co-curricular activities, highlighting their role in developing analytical thinking, confidence, and communication skills. The students participated with great enthusiasm and attentiveness, and many of them shared their thoughts and experiences during the interactive sessions.

The paper presenters were highly appreciated for their original ideas, clear articulation, and well-researched presentations. Their efforts reflected both academic sincerity and intellectual depth. Students from other departments were also present at the seminar and actively engaged in the question-answer session, making the programme more vibrant and interdisciplinary in nature.

Overall, the seminar turned out to be a meaningful and enriching academic event that successfully fostered thoughtful discussion and active participation among students and teachers alike.
